Biography: Jennifer Grandy is an emerging and developing writer actively building her writing portfolio. After a successful career within the engineering and information technology sectors, inspired by market circumstances, loss and life changes, she decided it was time to embark on a new venture and move forward with her long time passion for writing.

Her work is non fiction based, focusing on personal experiences, topics of interest and areas of research. She currently runs a personal blog where she has taken her experiences, creating a space to share her journey with complex grief and growth in moving forward, encompassing an array of content from reflections, perspective and tributes to health, wellness, travel, and food. She is eager to contribute to freelance writing opportunities, feature articles and publications, and aspires to carry out the unfinished written biographical work of her late family members.

A native of Mount Pearl, Jennifer has made Conception Bay South her home for the past 25 years with her Husband, Son and furbabies. A dog lover, with a soft spot for Beagles, her family have adopted multiple beagles over the years and she currently volunteers with Beagle Paws Rescue. An avid runner, walker and advocate for health and wellness being essential to your well being, Jennifer spends a lot of time hitting the beautiful Newfoundland trails and is a firm believer that movement and spending time in nature can help both physically and mentally in tackling life's challenges.
