Biography:

Roxane Hudon is a freelance writer and editor. She has over 15 years of experience in cultural journalism, web copywriting, brand storytelling, FR-EN translation, and traditional or digital marketing. She contributes to the Montreal Review of Books, co-hosts The Rhetorizer, a podcast about books, and has previously written for Cult MTL and the now defunct Montreal Mirror. She lives on Fogo Island where she has recently completed her first novel.

Selected Publications:

Montreal Review of Books, Read Quebec, Cult MTL, Montreal Mirror

Selected Awards:

I was nominated for an Expozine Alternative Press Award twice: in 2015 for my self-published novella Tales from a Room and in 2018 for my zine Good Grief. In 2023, I was long-listed for the CBC Nonfiction Prize for a story titled Leeward Lessons.
